Tuesday, November 21, 2000 - 10:00 AM

Yes, you are the linkage, the little nothing, as you qualify yourself, which permits us to communicate at this level of existence with my son. This approach is slightly different from what he knows otherwise and appreciates.

"You know, since you also experience it, that a written confirmation reassures the human side of the being. What is experienced through the heart, feeling or inspiration, as you call it, is most often impalpable and unverifiable. A written message is more edifying; it reinforces what is sensed. The human being by nature needs to be reassured. No matter whether or not he admits that, it is his nature that requires that.

"He feels fragile in the face of existence's ups and downs. He realizes that he is not able to master everything and that like everyone he must undergo the consequences of events. He is alone in the face of all sorts of tragedies that occur inevitably: illness, the death of loved ones, which doesn't lack to occur in one's life and cannot be avoided.

"Considering this perspective, the greatest humility should be the order of the day, for each of us."

Babuji