Monday, September 8, 2003 - 10:00 AM

Your heart has come a long way before being so dazzled by your Master. At last, shall we say! This meeting is a culmination, which makes us happy.

"My son will return to Indian lands. We will directly speak to him, when he has started to take stock of his voyage. It was productive in many respects, even if the impacts cannot be measured objectively. His presence attracts the hearts. It leaves an indelible mark on them. His power is growing, which he cannot measure himself: it is in the nature of things. We observe the progress of our Mission. One day it will belong to the great redeeming movements of humanity. Right now, it is performing a considerable preparatory work in the development of big projects concerning the future of the world. Broken and bruised, it will have to turn to true values, at the risk of disappearing in the floods of oblivion. All the hierarchy is attentive to the progression of our way. It is marking present times and will become more and more apparent in compliance with God's ways whose laws prevail unrelentingly.

"Each human being who is devoted to him can note it: his life does not belong to him. Only surrender can enable him to fulfil the requirements which that state implies. Think about it, my child, and offer your heart more than ever."

Babuji