Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Thursday, January 1, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

My child, you are transcribing exactly what is imprinted in you. Don't worry about it. Texts of this kind – the most ancient ones that have been considered as sacred – are easy to understand. Their style is simple, and they are able to touch hearts and are not burdened with complicated formulas. They are just as they should be to lead the reader to a necessary introspection for his evolution. We are in exactly the appropriate tone today and tomorrow, when these messages will largely 'soar' and touch hearts more than you can imagine.

"You will then understand all the implications of your work. Your efforts to perform it correctly on certain days, in spite of your ordeals, will be greatly rewarded. These are live writings; they fit into everyday life, its difficulties and its joys, and they constantly highlight the results of a diligent practice, embellished with the ensuing graces. Nothing is superfluous in these comments; our brothers will recognise themselves in them. As your Master pointed out to you: 'There is nothing personal in these exchanges.'

"At each stage in his life, man goes through events that are sometimes painful; what does not concern him today will touch him deeply tomorrow. His way is fraught with many experiences; all of them, without exception, are enlightening. Sadness and joy, as well as suffering, are expressed through these lines. Who will not sooner or later feel concerned by them? Loving God and being devoted to Him, as our aspirants are doing in our way, entails accepting His laws and their rigour in a song of constant love, as we recommend it. Our blessings will always be upon them."
