Tuesday, September 7, 2004 - 10:00 AM

It is good for the aspirant to carry on his process while recalling points that are essential to the evolution of a being. We consistently come back to most of them, with a view to raising awareness: the flash that is likely to make light spring in them. A human being is like that: he advances in stages, he grows spiritually step by step, and this quest must be based on a teaching able to touch him at the right moment.

"This process is slow and adjusted to the predispositions of anyone who can find in our way an answer to one's aspirations. This spiritual process is not humanly obvious, hence the need for confidence and surrender.

"To have a spiritual Master, a divine guide, is an achievement. All, subsequently, takes on another dimension: the road is mapped out and work can be done safely. While advancing in the way, these concepts become less abstract for the abhyasi. The burden becomes lighter through cleaning and transmission, thus refining the sensitivity of our brothers. They are advancing while releasing themselves from superfluous and useless aspects.

"Beautiful is this way ennobling the soul in view of the great journey, whose goal is taking shape with small touches skilfully and with time. This quest is the most glorious. It cannot disappoint; God provides for that, His splendour is conquered with perseverance in view of the final apotheosis."

Babuji