Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, June 8, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

All rivers big or small, even the least stream, have only one and the same destination: to flow into the ocean and be subsumed into it in the most beautiful anonymity.

Thus it is with souls: when they have completed their journey, they immerse themselves into an ocean of grace and endlessly vibrate with love. Such is the final goal, the apotheosis that must result from all these long, sometimes painful, journeys that lead to what must be. With time, the soul accelerates its speed. Its vibration intensifies and propels it on an orbit more suited to its own rhythm.

To vibrate with love, this is the goal to be reached: to ensure that this state is almost permanent. To maintain in one's heart a state which cannot be influenced by any negative vibration, to preserve this powerful flame out of any reach – this is the secret. Take refuge in sadhana when you feel it necessary; you will find serenity therein. This oasis of purity must help you to face the vicissitudes of this Earthly existence. It is the sole and surest refuge.
