Whispers from The Brighter World

No, my child, we will not stop like that. You will all get accustomed to this idea, and perhaps realize the importance of what you are given, feel like rereading, and put some advice to good use. In this wide-ranging review we have done together, we don't think we have left anything out. You may find in the depths of your hearts a certain nostalgia that will make you grow. One truly appreciates beings and privileged moments only when one loses them.

Be well aware of that, look around and within yourselves; appreciate the reality of the profound being that lives in you, its aspirations, far from any superficial life.

Take account of your true personality, of its needs. Do not alienate it to constantly satisfy egotistic needs, personal desires; know how to sometimes put these aside to express more altruism around you. You will notice how much joy this behaviour can bring you. Try it, that doesn't cost anything and can give you happiness.
