Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, June 1, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

I am here, don't be afraid, we know you need time to emerge; this treatment is a bit bothersome.

We're going to try to be less sombre today.

Yes, we also have moods, and they are multiplied by x number of times, compared with what you all can experience on Earth. We cannot give any more details, our measurements being completely different from yours.

Know that we go through very intense states across the full gamut of what you call emotions, which are for us of a different order. We are in a completely different register.

This makes you think, in certain circumstances, that we are insensitive to the difficulties you are experiencing.

We are often profoundly saddened, but we know that this passage is mandatory for you all. You have to go through this door, it is unavoidable.

This point is difficult to understand, but we assure you that it's very promising.

The coach who sees his players pushing themselves to the limit on a playing field is happy.

He can assess their resilience, their strength of character and their determination.

He knows what he can expect from each of them. But he is not a tormentor.

For us, a great and beautiful soul requires all our attention.

We don't feel sorry for his or her trials, whatever they may be. At the human level, we know that from this painful passage on Earth a strong soul will emerge, well-armed to brilliantly continue its trajectory, and we rejoice in that.

Be in acceptance, love; we return it to you all.
