Saturday, June 5, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Who can understand you? Your life is not ordinary; it comprises particular aspects that put you in the sidelines of your circle. Follow your own way, my daughter, without letting yourself be destabilized by the reactions of others. All that does not matter, only the goal counts, and the rest is of secondary importance. Your days are set out to be listening to us, which leads to very positive results that will be exploited as is proper. Not everyone can do what you are doing, therefore be happy for being chosen to serve and love us, both being inseparably intertwined. How could your role in this business not be mentioned? You are its core element, therefore do not feel embarrassed—you shouldn't be.

"My son is cogitating very much in this moment about the structuring of the Mission; it is all connected and is essential to the effective functioning of the whole. To find elements capable of serving with all their heart, without their ego overriding the role they have to play, is not easy. Many are taken in by it, exceeding their prerogatives to impose their own will above all. The Mission is advancing and will not weaken; that is what matters. The human being is as he is, imperfect but perfectible.

"Each one of our brothers is doing their level best; our way is at the service of all and there are many willing people. Most of them are faithful and are progressing over the years, showing the effectiveness of our system.

"Humanity is trying to search for itself; it will have to make a fresh start, so as not to be lost. A great stride has to be made, please God that everything is accomplished for the good of each one."

Babuji