Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, July 5, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

The possibilities of this Mission will not cease growing, and its action will spread more and more across the world to meet a growing call. Many changes will occur on Earth and humans will revert to values that are more just and capable of answering a profound appeal – the longing of the soul to rise. Other dimensions of consciousness offer themselves to humans, yet it is still necessary to work in that direction and become truly motivated to achieve the required level. Everything is possible; fervour begets grace, which can achieve what seemed impossible. Times will change, this is sure – fortunately, shall we say. Great cycles of renewal have occurred on this Earth for the good of all and they will occur again.

Envisioning a better world is proper; it denotes an aspiration to progress, to move towards the good, towards what is best in every respect. It is not harmful to dream in this way; why should evil prevail over good? A balance must be established, allowing humans a life more conducive to their evolution. The purpose of each one lies here and not in feats that flatter the ego; the best does not lie there. Nothing is simple – neither to live, nor to understand – hence the need for surrender as advocated in a spiritual way like ours. It is the essential thing; rebelling is not constructive, as it diverts humans more than it guides them. The objective of one and all, whether they are aware of it or not, is to achieve the ultimate goal, one that leads the aspirant to a promising level of consciousness for the blossoming of the soul. We are working for this unceasingly, as wished by the higher powers; so it is.
