Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, July 8, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Time that passes has no return. One can never go back and start again to live such-and-such a situation. Do not forget this truth. You cannot make up for your mistakes: I could have done this or that, tried to understand this situation, this brother, this sister in difficulty.

I have taken little or no interest in this problem; it does not concern me, etc.

Every day, you all miss an opportunity to express the good in you. A smile, a gesture, a service that would cost you so little and take little time. But time flies so quickly, it is unreal, it passes; there remains only the gesture you made by letting your heart manifest itself.

In your current way of life, you are always in a hurry, overwhelmed, overworked and tired, tired of yourselves!

Rest your mind, you have not properly understood how you can all benefit from a true meditation that refocuses you, where the tamed mind – not completely but enough to make you reach a degree of inner peace – is then able to give you wings and the courage to act, for yourselves and others.

Do not remain turned in on yourselves. Open your hearts on the infinite without forgetting the creature.
